"If the crowns of all the kingdoms of Europe were laid down at my feet in exchange for my books and my love of reading, I would spurn them all." . . . . . Archbishop Fenelon.

"An author may be considered as a merciful substitute to the legislature. He acts not by punishing crimes, but by preventing them." . . . . . Oliver Goldsmith.

"It is books that teach us to refine our pleasures when young, and which, having so taught us, enable us to recall them with satisfaction when old." . . . . . Leigh Hunt.

"I no sooner come into the library, but I bolt the door, to me excluding lust, ambition, avarice, and all such vices, whose nurse is idleness, the mother of ignorance, and melancholy herself; and in the very lap of eternity, amongst so many divine souls, I take my seat with so lofty a spirit and sweet content, that I pity all our great ones, and rich men, that know not this happiness." . . . . . Heinsius, quoted by Burton.

"Books look on as to their Readers or Authours do at the very first Mention, challenge Preheminence above the Worlds admired fine things.—Books are the Glasse of Counsell to dress ourselves by. They are lifes best business: Vocation to these hath more Emolument coming in, than all the other busie Termes of life. They are Feelesse Counsellours, no delaying Patrons, of easie Accessee, and kind Expedition, never sending away empty any Client or Petitioner.—They are for Company, the best Friends; in doubts, Counsellours; in Damps, Comforters: Times Prospective, the home Traveller's Ship, or Horse, the busie man's best Recreation, the Opiate of Idle weariness, the Minds best Ordinary, Nature's Garden and Seed-plot of Immortality. Time spent (needlesly) from them is consumed, but with them twice gain'd. Time captivated and snatched from thee, by Incursions of business, Thefts of Visitants, or by thy own Carelessnessse lost, is by these redeemed in life, they they are the Soules Viaticum; and against death its Cordiall.—In a true verdict, no such Treasure as a Library." . . . . . Dr. Richard Whitlock.

BURNS, ROBERT. Poems, chiefly in Scottish dialect. 12mo. pp. 364. Portrait. $12 00. Philadelphia, 1788.

"I have seen two editions of the works of Robert Burns—the one printed in New York, the other in Philadelphia, 1788. These books are somewhat remarkable American typographical as well as literary curiosities. Their appearance here at that time, and within six months of his works being first printed in Edinburgh, is a conclusive proof that the fame of Burns had reached the shores of the New World some time prior to that, or very shortly after he became celebrated in his own country. The execution is rude and the paper poor, in keeping with the other productions of the press in this country at that time. Notwithstanding, it equals in every respect the Kilmarnock edition, which was the first that made Burns known to the world. This was in 1786. The Portrait is very well engraved, for the time, and is a very good fac simile of the one which accompanied the first Edinburgh edition."—Western Memorabilia.

- **The above publication is, in some respects, a great American typographical curiosity, inasmuch as a book like this, which has been censured by every rigid moralist, should have been reprinted in the land of steady habits immediately on its appearance in England. Either the publisher must have been a bold adventurer in undertaking this publication, or we at this time do not fully comprehend the character of the then population of New England. Some future American Dibdin will gloat over this book, and pronounce it a wonder, a monster, or premature birth.—Western Memorabilia.*

New York and Boston, 1784.

"Gen. Alexander Hamilton was among the greatest, if not the very greatest of the men that took part in accomplishing the American Revolution—he was an honest and fearless advocate of a firm or strong government, from a sincere conviction that no other kind of government was calculated to perpetuate what they had acquired at the cost of so many toils and sacrifices. For such unflinching adherence to this cause, his memory ought to be held in grateful remembrance by all who love honest and fearless advocacy of right principles in opposition to demagoguism and the love of popularity which is too apt to sway public men in free governments; as was the case with many of his compatriots. I saw, in 1847, the venerable widow of this celebrated statesman, and took the opportunity of making several inquiries regarding Washington, which met with ready and satisfactory answers. Her eye still possessed a youthful brilliancy, though her other features showed all the marks of extreme old age, as she was then nearly a hundred years old."—Western Memorabilia.

The State of New York has already been very famous for signalizing herself in works conducive to national glory. Her monuments have not been designed as a memento of exaltation over the fallen fortunes of a neighboring people, or the conquest of a distant province; nor have they been constructed to gratify the pride of any single individual—nor to excite the wonder and amazement, or the jealousy of other nations—but they have been created solely for the benefit of her citizens, indiscriminately, without reference to national pride, or fear of expense. For example, the Public Schools educate annually, eight hundred and thirty-two thousand children, at a cost of two million, two hundred and forty-nine thousand, eight hundred dollars ($2,249,800 00). The Erie Canal cost about twenty-one million dollars ($21,000,000 00), and is 364 miles in length. The Erie Railroad cost about thirty millions of dollars ($30,000,000 00), and its length is four hundred and sixty miles (460). The Croton Aqueduct, (which conveys the water that supplies the city of New York), cost about fifteen millions of dollars ($15,000,000 00), and its length is forty-five miles (45). The Natural History of the State has already cost about seven hundred thousand dollars. ($700,000.) It now numbers eighteen quarto volumes, superbly illustrated with plates, and accompanied with a Map of the State. This work may vie with Napoleon's great work on Egypt, for magnificence, and far transcends it for utility.

The ancients were proud of their national monuments. For example, India could boast of her Elora, Egypt of her Pyramids, Syria of her Baalbec, China of her stupendous Wall, Greece of her Temples, and Rome of her Triumphal Arches, Pillars, and aqueducts. But all these dwindle into insignificance, when compared with the public works of the State of New York, especially when we take the higher aim and object into view.—Western Memorabilia.

Ex-Sheriff Parkins was accustomed to frequent my store, and always appeared to me decidedly one of the most remarkable men with whom I had ever been acquainted. For violence of temper, volubility of sarcastic epithet, withering invective, slanderous attack, and downright crushing abuse, I will venture to say that he never had an equal. The least provocation, real or imaginary, would make him launch his thunders upon any one, without respect of persons. On one occasion he made an onslaught upon McDonald Clarke, the Mad Poet, that frightened the poor fellow most tremendously. "I take you, sir," said he,

"to be a countryman of Dr. Franklin, the damnedest hypocrite, and most blasted villain that ever dared to cross the seas." Clarke stood aghast, confounded and petrified. Many specimens of his peculiar manner of expressing himself will be found in his trial—perhaps the only record left, in print, of this very remarkable man. In some other situation of life, he might have been one of the nobles of the earth; but alas how much depends on circumstances.
He had a special aversion to the memory of Dr. Franklin, Dr. Hugh Williamson, Dr.
David Hosack, and a Mr. Weekes, who had once been tried for murder in this city, and a Boston merchant of the name of Gray.

One of the many notable characters I have often come in contact with, was John Howard Payne. He always appeared to be a melancholy, desponding, heart-broken man; and from his remarks, evidently had a very unfavorable opinion of mankind in general, and of his own countrymen especially. "No people," said he, "understand, appreciate, or reward merit less than the Americans." The last time I saw him, it was on the eve of his departure on his mission to the Barbary States. He said he had had great difficulty in procuring the appointment, and was compelled to pay his own expenses in going there, the government having refused to do so; at which time he looked old, thin and emaciated, and had the bad taste to wear mustachios that were gray, and of uncouth appearance. He was the author of numerous dramas, songs, newspaper and Magazine criticisms, and biographical sketches, a catalogue of which I have attempted to collect. He was one of those persons whose mental visions are always teeming with magnificent literary projects; but not having a mind sufficiently practical to give form and birth to any of such schemes, they expire without being tangible to the public, or even to himself. Notwithstanding all that he has written, posterity will know him only by his single song of "Home, sweet home." Johnson's remark on Gréy's Elegy may with propriety be applied to this song: "It abounds with images which find a mirror in every mind, and with sentiments to which every bosom returns an echo."—Western Memorabilia.
